Supply Chain

The companies maintain relationships with many organisations in its supply chain, as well as being a direct employer. In consideration of the general employment laws, human rights, and the modern-day slavery Act 2015, the compliance and risk management processes have been reviewed. This determines to what extent measures already exist and what further measures may be required to prevent slavery and human trafficking taking place in any part of the business or in its supply chains.

This statement forms part the Business Management Systems and underlies commitment to compliance within our industry. The processes are evolving and being updated to take account of the use of forced, compulsory or trafficking labour, or anyone held in slavery or servitude, whether adults or children.

The companies are committed to ensuring transparency in their own businesses and their approach to tackling modern slavery throughout their supply chains.

Due Diligence

Whilst recognising the statutory obligation to set out the steps taken to ensure that modern slavery and human trafficking is not taking place in our domiciled UK supply chain, the companies acknowledge that they do not control the conduct of individuals, organisations and those suppliers domiciled outside of the UK. To underpin compliance with practical steps, the companies intend to implement the following measures:

- Engage with domiciled UK suppliers both to convey to them our Modern-Day Slavery Statement, obtain a copy of their statement where applicable and/or gain an understanding of the measures taken by them to ensure modern slavery is not occurring in their businesses.
- Monitor UK supply chain through quality system supplier evaluation process, coupled with professional chartered memberships and confirm that suppliers accept the company's right to audit their activities (where practicable) at times of reasonable suspicion.

Key Performance Indicators

The following key performance indicators (KPI's) may be used to measure how effective the companies are at preventing slavery from being part of our business in any way.

- Information instruction and training for all employees.
- Identify higher risk suppliers and audit their activities where appropriate.
- Close out investigations and remedial actions undertaken in respect of audit findings.

Training & Communication

All employees will be informed through training of their obligation to familiarise themselves with the company's procedures to help in the identification and prevention of modern-day slavery and to conduct business in such a manner that the opportunity for an incident of modern-day slavery would be prevented.

The companies encourage all employees or any third party to inform the HR Management, in confidence, of any concern or issue of suspicion regarding a person acting on behalf of their company, one of its suppliers or one of its businesses seeking to exploit another person or persons in a way which could amount to modern slavery.

The companies' aims to encourage openness and will support anyone who raises genuine concerns in good faith under their policies, even if they turn out to be mistaken. Any reports are to be kept in confidence, subject to the need for the company to act responsibly and within the law.

The approach to modern day slavery must be communicated to suppliers, contractors and business partners domiciled within the UK at the outset of the company's business relationship with them and reinforced as appropriate thereafter.
